

Time Management

I. Introduction

- In today's world where time is the most valuable currency that we can use. The reason why it is heavily valued is because we can never get our time back, once it's used it will never go back. So why do people waste time? Instead of working on our responsibilities, we waste time doing irrelevant activities or spend our time on a single responsibility and giving less time to other responsibilities. It is a real world problem that people face and causes them greater stress in school or work due to the deadline approaching over time.

II. Problem Description

- Time is not a replenishable resource, despite our best wishes. We might be able to work eight or ten hours a day on average. Social media's explosive growth over the last ten or so years has allowed us to avoid boring duties, but it also serves as a simple diversion(Why so many people struggle with time management skills, 2024).
- The typical person spends 2.5 hours a day on social media, which is time that could be better used for constructive endeavors. The adage "one hour of planning can save you 10 hours of doing" makes it simple to see how social media browsing can significantly affect your workday(Why so many people struggle with time management skills, 2024).

III. Proposed Solution

- To fix this problem we can make an app that help the user organize his time based on the priority of the task and prevents you from getting distracted.
- Features include list of tasks, priority system, anti distraction system, task reminder, alarm if it's time to move to the next task, task history.

IV. Conclusion

- In conclusion, time is a precious valuable that can never be attained but can be wasted so it is important to manage time effectively to make the use of our time here on earth.

Reference:

- User, G. (2024, August 20). Why so many people struggle with time management skills — Stormboard. Stormboard.
<https://stormboard.com/blog/why-so-many-struggle-with-time-management-skills>